

Abandoning one's muse

Letter to the editor, Queen's Journal, 18 November 2016

<http://www.queensjournal.ca/story/2016-11-18/opinions/letter-to-the-editors-november-18/>

Mark Mercer
Department of Philosophy
Saint Mary's University
Halifax, NS B3H 3C3
mark.mercer@smu.ca

Regarding the report “Queen’s Vagabond suspends production of Othello” (4 November 2016, <http://www.queensjournal.ca/story/2016-11-03/arts/queens-vagabond-suspends-production-of-othello/>)

Anyone who was actually threatened should have contacted the police. Those who disapproved of the casting should have criticized the director’s interpretation, after having carefully watched the play. The only thing artists should ever apologize for is making bad art—or abandoning their muse, as Purdon and Rossiter did. It’s too bad that no one reminded Purdon and Rossiter that the show must go on.