Robert,

I've not been told who complained about receiving my message or what the substance of their complaint was.

You allege that I breached something or other in Saint Mary's documents but you have not specified what I breached or how I breached it.

You claim that my sending that message to some of the people I sent it to was disrespectful. How could it have been disrespectful to some but not others? How was it disrespectful to those who were upset by it?

I cannot be mindful not to cross some line again in my role as a critic of our university and academia generally if I do not know what line it is you think I crossed. Send me a message or let's talk on Zoom or whatever and tell me what in the world was wrong with my sending that message to the people I sent it to.

The fact is, as I've explained, I've treated no one disrespectfully.

Mark
